Tearing down the past builds healthier future for wetlands

Tears down the past builds healthier future for wetlands

Coast cities may link with Japan on tsunami research

Coast cities may link with Japan on tsunami research

CMH reported as 'most wired' by U.S. magazine

CMH reported as 'most wired' by U.S. magazine

Seaside Council raises city manager’s pay
Book bins are run by for-profit company

Ania Library supporters fear they'll lose out on donated books to the big blue collection bins.

By D.K. ROW

With the new popping-up concept, a number of libraries in the area have been overhauled with bins run by For-Profit Library Solutions, a company that participates in the national Book Bins program. The bins are an extension of the company's already successful program in which businesses and individuals donate books to be sold online, raising funds for the library.

The bins have become a controversial issue in the community, with some residents concerned about the impact on local libraries. Others see the bins as a way to promote literacy and encourage reading.

"We're not a profit-driven organization," said one representative from the company. "We're a community-driven one, and we want to make sure that the books are going to the right place and helping to spread knowledge."
Fish
Continued from Page One
It’s done all the time, the author says, it’s okay for the harvest on wild fish.

Prioritizing projects
To solve the problem of the Chis- nock, one of the last of the 18 dams on the river, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has decided that the only way to protect the population of salmon is to remove the dam. The service has also decided to spend $12 million on near-term projects designed to help the salmon recover in the short term. This will involve the construction of fish ladders, barriers to keep salmon from entering the dam, and the installation of larger spillways and waterways to allow salmon to bypass the dam. The service estimates that the near-term projects will cost an additional $12 million over the next five years.

Washington Post
WADACILRIGHT FOR THE CURE
Help kick off our cancer recovery campaign this Sunday. Join us as we celebrate our 50th anniversary. Attendees are invited to purchase a ticket to the event for $50 or donate online. Visit our website for more information.

And it’s time to start looking at the future. The service is currently working on a long-term plan to restore the salmon population to its pre-dam levels. This plan includes the construction of additional fish ladders and barriers, and the installation of larger spillways and waterways to allow salmon to bypass the dam. The service estimates that the long-term plan will cost an additional $12 million over the next 20 years.

WORLD/NORTHWEST

20,000 march against violence
An anti-violence march that began as a small protest has grown into a massive demonstration involving thousands of people. The march started in Seattle and ended in downtown Portland, Oregon. Marchers are calling for an end to violence against women and children.

A demonstrator holds a sign on the steps of the Portland City Hall. The signs read "No More Violence Against Women" and "We Must Stand Together.

Jewelry Appraisal Event May 18
Portland
A jewelry appraisal event will be held on May 18th from 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. at the Portland Fine Art Center. The event is free and open to the public. Attendees will have the opportunity to have their jewelry appraised by a professional appraiser. The appraiser will provide a written appraisal of the jewelry and discuss any potential value.

Jewelry Appraisal Services
Call Now For Your Quote!
(888) 249-7923

Positive Changes Hypnosis Works! - Here, try it!

Close your eyes and imagine being a different person...

Call Now for Your FREE Information Kit!

Bonhams & Butterfields Auctions

1422 Clay Street, San Francisco, CA 94111

For more information, please call (415) 546-1700 or visit our website at bonhamsbutterfields.com.